Title : “Perceptions Of Self-Defense At Today’s Generation In ULAB Going Students”

1.Introduction

Focus Area

The way that today’s youth generation views self-defense depends significantly on their individual experiences, upbringing, cultural beliefs, and socio-economic circumstances.This study looks into how self-defense is viewed by the current generation of ULAB students and what its effects are.Others view self-defense superfluous or a reason for concern, while some consider it as an essential ability to protect themselves in a society that is becoming more unstable. On the streets of Dhaka, nearly all women encounter sexual and physical harassment. Particularly, female students attending ULAB are also the targets of this type of harassment.Sexual offenses have alarmingly increased in Bangladesh. An ULAB student is killed on January 28, 2021, after being raped.A recent study found that 17,000 rape cases were filed against her in the country over the past four years. Even more alarming is the fact that women are often blamed for what they endure and law enforcement just doesn't care.

As a result, the woman must take action to defend herself. You must become self-protective. Gaining self - defense skills can boost your self-assurance and your capacity to repel or resist possible attacks. Additionally, it can dispel ingrained gender prejudices that hold women to be weaker than males.

The main idea of this research is to look at the perception of self-defense at today's generation like youth generation in ULAB going students and what are the impacts of the students towards self-defense.

2.Context

Protecting yourself as well as others from physical harm or threat is known as self-defense. To defend against attackers, this typically entails the use of physical methods, strategies, or tools. Carrying small defensive weapons like pepper spray and tasers or engaging in martial arts or boxing are just a few examples of how one might defend oneself. This is a crucial talent for people to have in order to safeguard their own health and advance personal safety. However, it's crucial to keep in mind That self-defense should only be employed when a genuine threat exists, and it should always be done responsibly and within the bounds of the law. Information on self-defense in Bangladesh is provided below:

Everyone has the right to defend their body against all offenses that affect the human body, according to Section 102 of the Criminal Code of 1860. When a legitimate fear of physical harm materializes, the right to private defense kicks in. Every day in Bangladesh, approximately 13 women and girls are raped. The country has a culture of impunity, and just 4% of cases result in justice. To prevent them from evolving into predators, it's crucial to concentrate on breeding better men. We must, however, enhance our knowledge and awareness of self-defense over a prolonged period of time. Because it is worthwhile to have any instrument that can prevent gender-based violence.

Impact of self-defense

A fun and effective approach to exercise the body and the mind is through self-defense.It also has several other effects, such as:

i) Personal Safety: Many people in Bangladesh are becoming more concerned about their personal safety as a result of increased crime rates, particularly in densely populated urban areas. Because of this, some people believe that learning self-defense skills and tactics is a need for shielding oneself from damage. These folks frequently participate in self-defense lessons or martial arts training, and they frequently have pepper spray and stun guns on them.

ii) Empowerment and Confidence: For some individuals, learning self-defense is about enhancing their sense of empowerment and self-assurance. The capacity to defend oneself physically fosters self-confidence and a sense of control over one's own safety. In Bangladesh, a lot of organizations and training facilities for self-defense focus exclusively on women, emphasizing their empowerment and giving them the tools they need to defend themselves.

iii) Legal limitations: Owning firearms for self-defense in Bangladesh is heavily controlled, and there aren't many licenses available. This restricts access to fatal self-defense techniques and can prompt some people to look for alternatives. People who are concerned about their safety but are unable to legally obtain firearms are becoming more and more interested in non-lethal self-defense techniques like pepper spray and personal protection devices.

iv) Lack of knowledge and education: The perceptions of young people in Bangladesh can be greatly impacted by a lack of knowledge of self-defense methods and possibilities. Lack of access to information, training opportunities, and education may cause a decline in self-defense awareness and interest. However, the number of Self-Defense Forces organizations and institutions devoted to training people and enhancing their skills is growing, particularly in urban areas.

The reasons behind choosing this topic

I've had sexual harassment from a few people, including some I consider family, starting when I was young and continuing into my adolescence. And I still experience sexual harassment almost every day. Since then, I've just had one regret: I wish I had taken self-defense classes. I'm hoping I can pick up self defense soon. I chose this subject because I want people to be informed so they won't go through what I have.

3. Topic Relevance

The goal of this study is to examine how today's generation in ULAB views self-defense. Going students' perspectives on self-defense differ from seeing it as a vital ability to protect oneself in a harmful environment to seeing it as a way to empower themselves and advance personally. However, these judgments are greatly influenced by cultural norms, legal limitations, and a lack of education.

4. Objectives of this research

The present study seeks to investigate the perceptions of self-defense at today's generation in ULAB going students. The specific objectives of the study are :

i) To investigate the perception of ULAB going students towards self-defense.
ii) To spread awareness and explore the entire process.

iii) To see how much confident a self-defense knowing students and the students who do not know self-defense.

5. Research Questions

This study has tried to find the answer of specific questions. They are,

RQ 1: What kind of harassment is being experienced by ULAB female students ?

RQ 2 : Who are behind these harassment ?

RQ 3 : What steps should be followed to safe women from this issue ?

RQ 4 : How can be this students focus on self-defense ?

6. Scopes and limitations of the Research

6.1.Scopes

i) Necessary steps can be taken like seminar or animated short flim/documentary to spread awareness towards sexual harrasment.

ii) Physical training of self-defense can be established in ULAB campus.

6.2.Limitations

i) Not all students will make an effort to comply out of concern that their opinions would get them in trouble, put their lives in danger, or lead to accusations of harassment from others.
ii) Not everyone will respond from their perspective since they may believe their response will be disregarded.

7. Literature Review

An outline of the proposal's main ideas and previously conducted research in the field is given in this part.

i) Title: "Sexual Harassment in Bangladesh: A Note on Legal Perspective".

In this research Khan,M.M.A. & Halder,G.D(2022) aimed to make the citizens of the state aware of different laws and legal provisions regarding sexual harassment.

Methodology : It lists numerous studies on the subject and defines the terminologies used in sexual harassment. Information was gathered from books, journals, internet, and case references. This article has also explored comparative viewpoints on sexual harassment in other nations. Thus, it is a quantitative approach.

Results : 54.7% of women who resided in metropolitan areas in 2017 reported experiencing gender-based violence, according to secondary data.physical, psychological, economical, and social, as well as hearing strange speech from other countries and occasionally from well-known individuals.

ii) Title: "Contextualising sexual harassment of adolescent girls in Bangladesh".

In this article Nahar,O., Reeuwijk,M.V.,& Reis,R.(2013) aimed to intended to contextualize a specific topic form of sexual harassment, specifically "New Year's Eve teasing", experienced by Bangladeshi girls (12-18 years old)emerged from a study of adolescent sexual behavior among young adults.

Methodology: Focus groups, key informant interviews, observation, and participatory approaches were all utilised in this study's qualitative research techniques.

Results: Boys and girls hold very different social positions, according to research. Girls should adhere to rigid rules when it comes to their sexual activity, as evidenced by this.Strong social stigma (particularly prevalent in men), reduced odds of finding a partner with a good career, and a higher danger of dowry payments for their families are all risks they run.

iii) Title: "The importance of self-defense training for sexual violence prevention".

In this article, Hollander,J.A.(2016) aimed that empowerment-based self-defense training helps to change the root conditions that allow violence against women to flourish.

Methodology: The qualitative method was used in this study's analysis.

Results: The results of this study pertain to self-defense instruction to avoid violation.

iv) Title : "Identifying factors of sexual violence against women and protection of their rights in Bangladesh".

In this research Banarjee,S.,(2018)aimed to identify the elements of sex violence against women in Bangladesh. In addition, the study also highlights barriers to women's access to the current justice system.

Methodology: Thematic analysis approaches and qualitative research methods were employed in this study.

Results: According to this study, the key factors contributing to sexual violence in Bangladesh include the patriarchal social structure, forced marriage, cultural norms, and obstacles to accessing the legal system.

v) Title: "Sexual harassment of Female Workers at Manufacturing Sector in Bangladesh".

In this article Faizul,H.M.,Sarkar, Rahman, M.A.,& Syfur,M.(2019) aimed to intended for dentify the status and nature of sexual harassment against female workers in Bangladesh.

Methodology: Four focus groups discussions (FGD) and six in-depth interviews (IDI) were held with employees.Working in Bangladeshi ready-to-wear, leather shoe, and tanning industries.

Results: The study's conclusions show that working women constantly worry about maintaining their sexual security. In Bangladesh, management generally does not protect female employees.

Summary of the five researches : Addressing sexual violence requires a multi-faceted approach. We need to address social norms, gender expectations, and social structures. Bystander education training is a promising intervention, but long-term strategies like social media campaigns and building healthy relationship skills are also important. While we work towards long-term change, we must also focus on immediate prevention to protect women from sexual violence. the study highlights the importance of coordinated efforts to address sexual violence against women in Bangladesh. It emphasizes the need to challenge patriarchal structures in society and promote gender equality. Community interventions, economic empowerment of women, involving men as partners against gender-based violence, media interventions, and public awareness campaigns are all crucial in combating sexual violence and promoting women's rights. It's essential to work together to create a society where women can live with equality and dignity. Women should be free from any kind of mistreatment and sexual violence. It's crucial for society to embrace modern teachings and values that promote gender equality and respect for women. By challenging social norms and cultural traditions that perpetuate these mistreatments, we can create a society where women are seen as equals and not just for men's satisfaction. It's important to address these issues at all levels, from the family to society and even in economic growth. Together, we can build a world where women's rights are protected and valued.Addressing sexual violence requires a multi-faceted approach. We need to challenge patriarchal structures, promote gender equality, and educate society through community interventions, economic empowerment, involving men as partners, media interventions, and public awareness campaigns. By working together, we can create a society where women are free from mistreatment and sexual violence, living with equality and dignity.

My research point different from previous researches:
Prioritizing immediate prevention is the greatest method, according to earlier studies, to create a society that shields women from sexual assault. The entire report emphasizes the importance of coordinating efforts to address sexual violence against women in Bangladesh. It emphasizes the importance of promoting gender equality and fighting patriarchal social organizations. And the goal of my study is to find out how female ULAB students see using self-defense. What do people think about this phrase? Moreover, take steps to raise awareness.

8. Research Design

8.1. Research Methodology: Focus group discussions (FGD) and the qualitative research methodology will be used in this study. In this debate amongst the Ulabian students, there will be two moderators who will note the key points.

8.2. Sampling

The sampling methods of the primary research will be

Stratified Random Sampling : Focus Group Discussion (FGD)

Investigating students attitudes toward self-defense at ULAB is the goal of our study. Investigate the entire procedure as well to raise awareness. The ULAB campus will be the precise location of the research. The location of the focus group discussion will be convenient for the participants. Because we can comprehend and learn from their perspectives and experiences. Two moderators will be present. A stratified random sample will be used for sampling. For instance: Students between the ages of 20 and 25 will be chosen. For this conversation, we would want to choose first-year students.

9. Timeframes

Background data collection = 25 Days

Literature review = 15 Days

Data collections = 20 Days

Data processing & analysis = 28 Days

Writing final findings = 32 Days

Total = 120 Days/ 4 Months

10. Budget

Resources (Books, Journals, Publications) = 7000 Tk

Stationary (Papers, Printing ,Pen)	= 1000 Tk
Operational Costs (Laptop, Internet)	= 176000 Tk
Transport	= 3000 Tk
